"The Making of the American Constitution" is a dissertation given on an address by Richard Beeman on his book entitled, "Plain Honest Men: The Making of the American Constitution." The essay relates Richard Beeman's address to the American Heritage course principle: the problem of government. In his address Richard Beeman tears down the stereotypes society makes of glorified founders of the constitution we hold today. Instead, Dr. Beeman displays the real nature of the individuals who collectively worked to frame a government that still stands successful today.
