They call themselves the Davenport Crew. Every few weeks or so, they gather together to talk and hangout, like they did when coming up in the town of Millport. But that feels like a lifetime ago.

It's 2014 and they're much older now, grown-up by some standards. During one of their get-togethers, Kyle, the oldest member of the crew, randomly brings up the grey Lincoln Continental, and Mike and his best confidants are all catapulting down memory lane.

The year is 1986 and things are quite different for the boys. They're teenagers again and life is beautiful and crisp like a pristine summer day. One day after school has let out, they go fishing under the bridge on their street, but there comes a meeting of great proportions when a dark stranger driving a mystic grey car stops by and alters the course of all their lives.

The horror is something they'll have to face up close and personal. Just like Mike says in the story, "Some things you can't just 86 from memory. You've got to deal with it until the end of the road."
