Remembering and Other Poems -- Inspirational Poems About Love, Life and Hope

John Harricharan

Remembering and Other Poems -- Inspirational Poems About Love, Life and Hope John Harricharan The poetry of John Harricharan, with delightful rhythm and rhyme, sings its way into the heart of the reader. Unlike the obscurantist riddles posed by many of today's poets, his lines invariably express a thought or emotion with crystal clarity.

John's themes are varied, ranging from deep romantic love to love of Nature and reverence for God. Some of his poems such as the prayer-like "Reflections at Eventide," voice deep philosophical insights. Most are marked by a healthy optimism. Really, they are inspirational poems about life and love and hope.

John Harricharan's first verses were written on a beach on a northern coast of South America with the sound of the Atlantic's waves in the background. Many were to follow—on jets between Guyana and New York City, on a beach in Barbados, a mountain in Trinidad, the Serengeti Plains of East Africa, in France, Spain , Italy and many other places. He is a natural poet—winning a prize for poetry at the age of 3 years. His poetry is inspirational as well as motivational and will rekindle the fires of hope and faith in your heart.

Not only is John a great poet, but he is also an award-winning bestselling author of such books as, "When You Can Walk on Water, Take the Boat," as well as the "PowerPause" and "Morning Has Been All Night Coming."

John's writings and lectures are always full of inspiration, motivation and hope.
