You're Called According to His Purpose Vivian Campbell
While working on this book, I read an article someone wrote about how a drawing was found behind the original picture a famous artist painted. And I thought, that's like the canvas of our lives. Right now, we see a picture, and for many of us it may not be a picture we like. But on that same canvas, a picture that we can't quite make out is being painted. As the Bible says, we see through a glass darkly. But when the full picture is revealed, we'll see the work is that of one that is highly skilled, superior, supreme, and above all. It is God, the Divine Artist of life at work. At that moment, we'll know even as we are known. The picture will reveal the person God sees, and we'll see our purpose as He sees it. Everything will be clear.
Writing the story of this book was like painting a picture of life. I believe most of us want a good life, and we have a picture of the life we want in our minds. And I believe when things like purpose and meaning are painted in the picture, they're like the warm and cool colors we need to make the picture of our life beautiful. But other things are also painted in the picture, things such as our faults, failures, frailties, weaknesses, and unpleasant experiences in our past or present. These things are like colors that don't match or blend in with the picture we have in our minds, and they can mess it up. At least we think so. And we may want to toss the picture.
There have been times when I've wanted to pursue something I thought would make my life better, but some negative thought or experience I had prevented me. I now know that negative thoughts and experiences we've had or have will always try to tempt us to give up on the life we've hoped for. But I've learned that we must hold to what we hope for, and if the picture we presently hold has something very negative in it, we must keep this in mind, it's a masterpiece in progress. God can and will make it good.
If you've read my book In Due Season, Pastor Gabe, the Pastor of Farrell Hills Fellowship, had started a program to help every member of his fellowship to seek and pursue God's purpose for their lives. Mr. and Mrs. Van de Goode taught the classes on Fulfilling your Purpose, and they encouraged those in their groups to pursue God's Purpose for their lives.
The story of this book is about another group from Farrell Hills Fellowship. They will go on a journey, and they'll also be encouraged to pursue their purpose. And this time, the focus is on two other characters, Phoebe and Martha and their adventures on the way to their Promised Land. We will see their strengths and weaknesses, and the problems and pitfalls that can hold a person back and prevent them from moving on to fulfill their purpose. And as we know, good and bad things come into the lives of those called by God, and we know all things work together for our good and for His purpose. But will those on this journey learn that lesson and see that? Let's journey with them and see what happens. And let's watch the Great Artist of life at work in their lives and see the masterpiece that comes about as a result.
