Lunar Facility David Woodin
What if death row inmates could be sent to a prison facility on the moon? There is no escaping from the moon so a death certificate could legally be sent back on the same ship that delivered them there. They would eventually die on the moon but the victims could rest assured they would never bother them or anyone else ever again. The prisoners family would no longer have to expend themselves in pursuing their release. A win- win for everyone. Purely fictional. If there was such a prison, there would be no way to really know if the prisoners where being treated right. There could be horrible abuse of prisoners by the guards and no one would know. The only way to know the truth would be to send an undercover reporter. How would their story end?
