Budgeting: Politics and Power Carol W. Lewis, W. Bartley Hildreth
A skillful balance of application and theory, Budgeting: Politics and Power by Carol W. Lewis and W. Bartley Hildreth is a comprehensive yet highly accessible introduction to the politics of budgeting. Unlike other texts on the subject-which typically focus only on budgeting issues at the federal level-this book emphasizes budgeting at the state and local levels to translate budgetary politics in a way that will be more relevant to the vast majority of students. In order to help students dissect the material and integrate it in a meaningful way, Lewis and Hildreth organize each chapter around key questions about core issues in a democracy. Informed by the authors' own individual backgrounds and expertise, the text presents a thorough-and unbiased-account of the different arguments and political perspectives surrounding budgetary politics. Features* Places a unique emphasis on the political aspects of budgeting* Provides students with the skills and tools they need to work through the political challenges and controversies of budgeting trade-offs* Offers strong pedagogy including web site resources, case studies, in-class exercises, discussion and review questions; many charts, tables, photos, and cartoons; a glossary of budgeting terms; and an appendix of key federal budgeting points* Draws on a wide range of academic disciplines including political science, public administration, public policy, economics, psychology, demography, and history* A Companion Web Site that provides links to videos, chronologies, web resources, additional technical and advanced materials, and primers on reading federal and state budgets
